Extension of Emergency Orders and Non-Essential Workplaces

The provincial government has extended all emergency orders, including non-essential workplaces, to until at least May 19. The extension of the emergency orders comes on the advice of the Chief Medical Officer for Health \(CMHO\).

Currently there is no set date for a return to work for audiologists and speech-language pathologists. As you turn your focus to re-opening and planning a safe environment for your patients, avoid scheduling in-person non-essential appointments until a restart date has been released by the provincial government.

The College is developing guidance to help audiologists and speech-language pathologists in preparation for return to work. We are working with the provincial government, the CMOH and other regulatory colleges.

We know you are eager to return to practice and will share our guidance as soon as it is available.

As we work together in addressing COVID-19, we are here to help you.

If you have questions, please contact us at: Practice Advice Team
